

How I've Evolved

By Jeff Doan

At the age of ten I wondered what I could be
I started riding my bike there every morning
Hoping to get someone to play with
I never stopped practicing, no matter what

As the days went on
I got better and better
As time went on I started to know more people
And people started to know and like me

I always did my best to try and impress everyone
Before I knew it I was getting better and better, without hardly noticing
As the scores got lower and lower, I evolved as a person
And as an athlete as well

Soon everyone there would grow to like me
And people were asking me to play
Instead of me asking them
High school came and so did success

I came accustomed to winning
I've done my best to stay as humble as humanly possible
I hope that with success, I still stay humble
And never forget my friends and the people that have helped me
